determining the preferred language;

providing an indication of the determined preferred language to the server;

receiving the application from the server, wherein the application is received in the preferred language;

downloading a language pack corresponding to the preferred language, the language pack comprising localized strings and string identifiers associated with the localized strings;

retrieving supplemental content of the application from the server, the supplemental content having identifiers for localizable strings;
finding a localizable string identifier of the retrieved supplemental content in the downloaded language pack, wherein the finding includes matching the localizable string identifier of the supplemental content with a localized string identifier of the downloaded language pack; and utilizing a localized string corresponding to the found localizable string identifier to provide localized supplemental content.

12. (Currently Amended) The ~~method~~ computer-readable medium of claim 11 wherein the utilizing includes reading the localized string corresponding to the found localizable string identifier from the language pack and providing the read localized string to a web browser operating at the client.

~~receiving an indication of a preferred language;~~
~~converting content of the application into the indicated preferred language;~~
~~providing the application with the converted content to the client;~~ ~~providing a language pack and supplemental content to the client, the language pack comprising localized strings relating to localizable strings of the supplemental content.~~ determining the preferred language;
providing an indication of the determined preferred language to the server;
receiving the application from the server, wherein the application is received in the preferred language;
downloading a language pack corresponding to the preferred language, the language pack comprising localized strings and string identifiers associated with the localized strings;
retrieving supplemental content of the application from the server, the supplemental content having identifiers for localizable strings;
finding a localizable string identifier of the retrieved supplemental content in the downloaded language pack, wherein the finding includes matching the localizable string identifier of the supplemental content with a localized string identifier of the downloaded language pack; and utilizing a localized string corresponding to the found localizable string identifier to provide localized supplemental content.

27. (Previously Presented) The method of claim 26 wherein the language pack further comprises an identifier for each localized string.

28. (Previously Presented) The method of claim 26 including providing a component object to the client.
